This session aims to provide an overview of the Green Paper 'SEND Review: right support, right place, right time', that was recently published by the Department for Education and the Department for Health and Social Care.

Our invited speaker André Imich, SEN and Disability Professional Adviser from the Department for Education will provide a short overview of the key changes proposed by the Green Paper.

This will be followed by a Q&A session and a Panel Discussion, which will highlight the key opportunities and challenges ahead, including the implications for the profession of educational psychologists
